Dear Rachel

I wanted to write and say what a pleasure it has been to work with you over the past months. I know the children you have been working with will miss you greatly. Although they have differing and difficult needs, it was noticeable that you had an instant rapport with the children. This was particularly evident in the response of [redacted] who, despite finding contact with new people difficult, developed an immediate bond with you.

The sessions the children have had with you have been both enjoyable and positive for the children. Staff have commented about how relaxed and responsive [redacted] is after her sessions. This has been an enormous benefit to both [redacted] and the staff working with her. All three children have been able to express themselves and have had wonderful opportunities to develop communication and self-expression skills.

I am sure that your quiet and calm persona has greatly contributed to the ease with which the children have developed relationships with you. As well as the positive contribution you have been able to make to the children's development I believe your sessions have, for [redacted] in particular, also provided an oasis of calm away from the hurly-burly of the classroom.

My only regret is that circumstances have prevented us from continuing with these dramatherapy sessions.

On behalf of everyone at Charlton-on-Otmoor school,

Thank you
